

Parents as Teachers™

Speakers Bureau

From teen father to Head Start teacher and site coordinator to working with probation and parole systems, William Scott brings a diverse background in family support to his work at Parents as Teachers.

A teenage father himself, Scott has been a passionate advocate for fathers, participating in rallies to raise awareness on issues such as paternal rights for dads affected by child support. He is a member of the St. Louis Fatherhood Initiative Committee and for several years has helped plan the Annual Fatherhood Walk and Rally benefitting fathers served by the Fathers Support Center.

Prior to coming to Parents as Teachers as program coordinator focusing on Head Start programs, Scott held many positions within Head Start, including teacher, lead teacher, site director, site coordinator, male/father involvement specialist and compliance specialist. Over the years his work with fathers has brought him together with probation and parole systems, family services, the division of workforce development and child support enforcement personnel as he sought to help fathers re-engage with their children.

Scott holds both bachelor's and master's degrees from Fontbonne University in St. Louis.
